Whereas the wage scale used by the Census Bureau during the 1970 census was considered extremely low, 1980 pay rates were viewed as very competitive. Since the 1980 census was taken during a period of relatively high unemployment in Puerto Rico and the Census Bureau offered competitive wages, the agency did not experience the recruiting difficulties it had faced in 1970. Data Collection Enumeration procedures--The enumeration of Puerto Rico was conducted by a combination of self-enumeration and personal interview similar to the conventional procedure used in the United States (see ch. 5). In areas with postal delivery service, an unaddressed advance census report (form D-13PR), containing a short questionnaire, a form letter, a Privacy Act notice, and a detachable instruction sheet, was delivered by a postal carrier to every housing unit on his or her route several days before Census Day, April 1, 1980. In areas without carrier delivery service, questionnaires were available where people picked up their mail. Householders were asked to fill out the questionnaire and give it to the enumerator when he or she visited the household. Beginning...
